- counsellors who have been accredited for less than 5 years with another UK professional body should have not less than 1.5 hours supervision per month, and the ratio should be appropriate to the volume and nature of client work. This level is not directly linked to the number of counselling hours. When the 1.5 hours per month level means that accredited counsellors would require more counselling supervision than under the standard 1:12 ratio, they can opt to follow the 1:12 ratio. The above levels are the recommended minimum level of counselling supervision and are not maximum levels. Depending on their assessment of the volume and nature of the client work, accredited counsellors would be expected to increase these levels.
- counsellors who have been accredited for more than 5 years should have not less than one hour supervision per month, and the ratio should be appropriate to the volume and nature of client work.
- the years of counsellor accreditation with another UK professional body count towards the 5 years of accreditation necessary to fulfil the requirement of the 1.5 hours and one hour of supervision per month.
