Conversion Practices: COSCA's Statement of Ethical Practice

COSCA's statement of ethical practice with regard to conversion practices is as follows:

'Within counselling and psychotherapy, COSCA opposes all psychological interventions, such as conversion practices, that are based on the premise of the counsellor/psychotherapist that the client should change or suppress their sexual orientation or gender identity.'

In COSCA's view, therapy should not be used by counsellors/psychotherapists to attempt to change or suppress the sexual orientation or gender identity of their clients.'
